Reference

Adams, J. (1976). Issues for a closed-loop theory of motor learning. In Stelmach, G. E.: Motor Control (87-107). New York: Academic Press.

Aslan, U. B., and Livanelioglu, A. (2002). Effects of hatha yoga training on aerobic power and anaerobic power in healthy young adults. Fizyoterapi Rehabilitasyon, April, 13(1):24-30.

Abernethy, et al. (1997). The Biophysical Foundations of Human Movement. Champaign IL: Human Kinetics.

Beth, and Larkin, (2006). Physical fitness of children with motor learning difficulties conducted. Health Sciences Papers and Journal Articles University of Notre Dame Australia.

Broer Marion, R. (1958). Effectiveness of a general basic skills curriculum for junior high school girls. Research Quarterly, 29:4 (December), 3 79.

Calvin, Sidney. (1958) Effect of progressive resistive exercise on motor co-ordination of boys. Research Quarterly, 30: 387.

Chhidda Giri, (1965). An evaluation and study of the effects of short term yogic exercises on the general physical fitness of adolescent high school students (Boys) as Gauged on the basis of athletic pentathlon tests. (Project Report, Kaivalyadhama S.M.Y.M. Samity, Lonavla, India).

Deasi, J. Ram, J. (1979). Effect of asana on skill development in basket ball. (Unpublished master thesis, Jiwaji University.

Freeman, G.L. (1965). The optimal muscular tensions for various performances. Amer, J. Psychol., 51, 146-150.

Gharrote, M.L. & Gangully, S.K. (1973). Effect of yogic training on physical fitness. Yoga Mimamsa XV (January): pp. 3 1-55.